More about our Speakers

Faatiemah Lodewyk (Clicks Group)

"Embrace your Place: It's in what makes us women and that is the power we yield to redefine the places we live, love and lead."

Faatiemah has worked for over 20 years across retail, financial services and FMCG. She recently joined the Clicks Group and heads up resourcing where she is passionate about delivering a sustainable talent pipeline. This is done through an effective and expert talent attraction team. She has hands-on experience and focus in HR for over 17 years' across numerous sectors. She is an organisational/industrial psychologist registered with the Health Professionals Council of SA and has a master's degree in industrialist/organisation psychology from the University of Western Cape as well as dabbling in some blogging and posting. She is passionate about youth development with respect to career choices and building talent pipeline at a scholastic level.

Desiree Paulsen (Africa Spirals of Change)

"Say No to discrimination and ensure organisations are spaces of equality and a home for all who work in it."

Desiree has 15 years' experience as an organisational development practitioner and transformation facilitator. She has a masters degree in adult education training and development and has international work experience. Desiree is passionate about ensuring that organisations become spaces where people are able to thrive and leaders are able to transform organisations so they become a home for all who work there. She looks at what are the behaviours that can take organisations forward and what needs to change at the individual and organisational levels. Her current work in facilitation of transformation and change processes includes: transformation journey's, diversity and transformation workshops and training workshops on developing facilitation skills. Her work as an organisational development practitioner includes strategic processes that assist organisations to align their vision mission and values.

Hanrie Fridjhon (Pro-Active Communications)

"Why do women apologise?"

Hanrie is the owner of Pro-Active Communications, which she started 22 years ago and specialises in business training and coaching. She specialises in communication and inspires teams and individuals through the facilitation of interactive workshops and business coaching. She is an avid reader and lifelong learner of anything interesting and inspiring. Her motto is "too many books, too little time". Hanrie 'walks the talk' by living her life with passion, balance and kindness. She lectures part-time at University of Stellenbosch for GAP Year, MBA and small business academy and management programmes. For Hanrie, 2018 is the year of letting go of the "empty nest syndrome" and age limitations! She strongly believes that exercise, meditation and a healthy diet is the answer to most problems.
