More about our Speakers

Mechell Chetty (Unilever)

"Bringing Purpose in the Workplace."

Mechell is the vice president of human resources for Unilever Africa. She is a people escalator, with the purpose of unlocking dignity for africans across the continent by bringing about their voice for change. She applies this daily in her role and is passionate about building african leaders for Africa. Apart from developing African leaders, Mechell is hugely invested in youth employability, driving diversity and inclusion throughout Unilever. During her 20 year tenure at Unilever, she has worked in human resources on leadership development, organisational effectiveness, culture transformation and business partnering. Mechell is also hugely passionate about health and wellbeing and has completed a number of cycle races and has climbed Mount Kilimanjaro. Mechell has a real zest for life and believes that everything is possible, as long as you enjoy it.

Nelisiwe Zuma (Blogger)

"The never ending adventure of Madame Blogger."

Nelisiwe is an eclectic mix of style, tenacity, and faith. Hailing from humble roots in Impendle KZN, this vibrant twenty-something blogger, public speaker, model, and survivor has made her mark on the social media and influencer world. She graduated from Durban University of Technology with a diploma in public relations management. She interned at the Department of Health in the MEC's office; but was then drawn to the world of social media and digital marketing. It was in this world that Madame Blogger was born... Her career highlights include: brand ambassador for Becca Blair Designs, guest influencer for KZN Bloggers Meet-Up, influencer of the month for The Original Champion Toffee, guest presenter at Future Females Durban, and the subject of a feature by London based Barcroft TV. Nelisiwe is currently a freelance Influencer marketing specialist and social media manager.

Robyn Clay (Linktank)

"If someone offers you an amazing opportunity but you are not sure you can do it, say yes – then learn how to do it later!", Richard Branson. What the Linktank team have learnt by adopting this idea in our business."

Robyn graduated from UCT in 1994 with post-graduate diploma in organisation and business management. Since then, she has worked in the financial services industry in the UK and SA. Her roles have varied from marketing and PR to operations management and technology implementation. She is currently the chief relationships officer at Linktank, a predominantly female start up, bridging the gap between technology and financial services businesses. "Saying yes first and learning how to do it later, has served her well and she has found that using technology, collaborating with industry-leading networks and focusing on establishing long-term relationships, has enabled her to learn fast and grow fast.
