Masindi Hoppenbrouwers (Liberty)

"Gender bias vs gender equality how will corporate get it right?"

Masindi has a degree in political sciences but was drawn to learning and development and started following that passion 12 years ago. Having been in consulting for over 8 years Masindi had exposure to different industries and different individuals. This has made her very aware of the importance of creating, building and nurturing relationships. It is important to understand the needs of other people and not the agenda you would like to drive. Masindi thrives in the success of others and has the ability to breakdown daunting tasks into something manageable and have individuals achieve their goals. Being able to shift the status quo and seeing people change their ways when they never thought they would is an absolute passion.

Lolly Gwabavu (Hollard)

She is someone naturally curious and truly obsessed with human motivation, behaviour and the potential impact that increased self-awareness and consciousness can have on people's quality of life. Lolly has a warm manner, open and loves to connect with people from all walks of life. Her other great loves currently are practicing meditation, mindfulness a very newly adopted habit of running as well as her young family.
